ITE Responds to Administration's Infrastructure Proposal

Washington, DC—The Institute of Transportation Engineers (ITE) issued the following statement in response to the public release of the Administration's infrastructure proposal:

"ITE is pleased the Administration has initiated the discussion on how to increase infrastructure funding," said Jeffrey F. Paniati, ITE Executive Director and CEO. "Federal leadership is essential to meet the significant needs that exist in communities of all sizes. ITE and its members look forward to working with the Administration and Congress to craft a final plan that will bring much needed new investments, address the long-term stability of the Highway Trust Fund, and equitably address both urban and rural infrastructure needs."
